of the New England Farmer, noticing as our inestimable privilege to contribute the improvement, remarks that he is so well pleased with it that he has no hesitation in recommending it as the best portable lamp with which he is acquainted.
"It gives a steady, brilliant light, without smoke, and at a very moderate expense. It requires to be fed only with the poorest oil, and even lard, tallow or grease will answer. The lamps are simple to the profoundest regard for the principles of the Democratic party, and shall make the most earnest efforts to inspire the citizens of Kansas with a like feeling, believing, as we do that a popular adoption of those principles will secure for them the greatest good.

"Educated in revergence for the docple in their construction, and cost only same material and workmanship, while lieve in their right and capacity to govern they give three or four times as much light. In short, they unite the brilliancy of camphene with the safety of the oil avoiding the serious evil of smoke."

Up and at 'em.

The Leavenworth Herald of the 30th ult. has a fiery leader, from which we extract the following:

"Remember that Free Soilers and Abolitionists have combined under the name of Free State, and boldly proclaim their hostility to the Douglass Bill, and their defence of the Aid Societies! Such, ye Old Guard of the West, is the progress of the lying and dastardly crew you have to contend against. Saith the Common Law: when any number of persons band themselves together for a common object detrimental to the interest of any body, it is conspiracy! We say boldly that by Law, all persons having connection with the Aid Societies are conspirators, and subject to indictment and conviction as such. They are criminals, and beside openly deny the powers of the Constitution of the United States, and consequently by their own acts him.

Society was instituted.

"Deeming it unnecessary, here, to expose and enlarge upon every article of our political creed, we present ourselves to you, without any further declaration of principles, for your friendly consideration, encouragement, and support.

"That you should have a newspaper at the seat of government we presume will not be questioned. You cannot encourage too many newspapers, at all points in the Territory; and you should unquestionably feel a deep interest in the proper conduct of one at this place. Give us your rights, but shall use every means in our power to furnish you with a readable fireside journal; such as your family (if you happen to have one) will perhaps find entertaining and instructive, and a pleasant companion and welcome weekly visitor."
